Advice Requested:

While on the phone discussing this ticket issue, Julie asked me about her plans to run 1 GIG to the desktop this summer. She said she was requesting money to upgrade her backbone from 100MEG to 1GIG, and then replacing all of her switches to full 1GIG ports and replacing older network cards in some machine to run at full 1GIG speed.

Detail of Recommendation:

I told her the I didn't feel that running 1GIG to the desktop would make a major impact on her users' access. I told her that my recommendation would be to upgrade her backbone to 1GIG and then put in a layer 3 switch and set up vlans across her campuss, putting each building on a separate vlan.

I explained that this would break down her broadcast domains, which would reduce the internal traffic on her LAN and thus increase her users' access to both the internet and server applications.

She wants to get further information on this, so I am going to try to schedule an on-site with Shannon Gardner to evaluate her campus and make recommendations.
