To Whom It May Concern:

We are uncomfortable executing our certificate of solvency for FY 2021 as the university continues with implementation of a multi-year financial stability plan. While Henderson State University has made significant progress in improving institutional financial stability, and is in a far more stable position than in the prior fiscal year, it will take additional time to achieve an accounts payable schedule that is not in arrears. While we are working diligently to correct that situation, we are not able to certify that we will have it corrected by June 30, 2021. Additionally, as a result of legislative action in FY2020, a $6 million budget advance for Henderson State University was converted into a no-interest loan with a payment deadline of June 30, 2028.

The University continues to take corrective actions in aligning expenses to revenue, including a further reduction in pay for most 12-month employees through a furlough in July and continuation of the reduction in retirement match contributions. In addition, staff continue to work with the ASU System in implementing policies, priorities and reporting mechanisms in rebuilding operational stability.

Please don't hesitate to let me know if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

James Borsig, PhD
Interim Chancellor
