Discussion of Issues Related to Adequacy Consultants

Representative Cozart stated the purpose of this meeting is for discussion of how the Committees can succeed in finding a solution to the problem of hiring, or not hiring, a consultant to conduct an Adequacy Study. He said no motions would be accepted at the meeting. He said the options are to continue on the same pathway projected in the original 2003 study; to hire one, or two, outside consultants; or, to conduct an in-house study.

Issues Included in the Discussion:

- Committees not having the time to pull an in-house study together,
- two studies are better than none,
- reviewing what the top ten countries in PISA (Programme for International Student Assessment) rankings do to stay on track,
- obvious merit of one consultant; nothing on which to base the merit of the second consultant,
- complexity of hiring an outside consultant,
- working within current framework and using available data and resources,
- process to date has been problematic and frustrating and needs to be changed,
- setting a precedent in having a subcommittee tell an experienced standing committee what to do,
- preparing children to compete, not just with surrounding states, but on the world market,
- need for change in the Matrix,
- making funding formula as equitable as possible,
- undermining the process and failing the children,
- need to face up to changes that have taken place since last study,

- need for outside expertise to help make a paradigm shift in education,
- listening to what Arkansas's educators are telling us,
- creating policies aligned and coherent with where we want to go,
- need for staff to check and share references of vendors, and
- estimating the cost for per diems paid out to members, and for tying up staff resources, if the study is conducted in-house.

Following the discussion, Representative Cozart informally polled members present to weigh opinions pertinent to this issue. He said he would later poll members not present. The results of the poll were: No study - 3, One study - 13, Two studies - 2.
