Arkansas is experiencing a persistent teacher shortage that threatens student outcomes. The statewide averages suggest 3–5% of teaching positions are unfilled or staffed by under-certified educators. The ADE DESE Office of Educator Effectiveness and Licensure is responsible for oversight and strategy for ensuring schools are staffed with effective educators who are licensed in their fields.

Randy Henderson
Blytheville

With a grant from the Walton Family Foundation, the department will create a real-time Data Dashboard to understand how the dynamics of shortages are changing and measure the impact of initiatives to reduce shortages. Additionally, it will create a statewide Educator Job Board, to help educators identify best-fit teaching positions statewide. The technology-enabled talent matching system will help teachers find jobs and help schools statewide fill their vacancies more efficiently.
