The state Medicaid budget spends nearly $300 million each year on tobacco related illnesses and total approximately $1.7 billion loss due to a decrease in worker productivity associated with illnesses. Raising the cigarette tax to $1.50 per pack will increase the state's revenue $121 million a year, prevent 22,500 youth from becoming adults who smoke, help 26,900 adults quit smoking, save 14,000 lives, and save $1.03 billion in long-term health care costs. Mr. Keck said raising state tax rates on other tobacco products to parallel the increased cigarette tax rate will bring the state additional revenue, improve public health benefits, and promote tax equity.
